Volunteer Speak

Hello this is Anusha Vimalakasha and I am studying electrical engineering at Bangalore. I have a friend who has been helping and teaching at a boarding school for orphan kids and that is what always inspired me.

I realised that education is not all about being a topper or just mugging up your subjects but it is more about what you do with your knowledge and experience. It should be shared.

One day I was searching for such an opportunity where I can teach students online and through iVolunteer I got to know about DBM India. They too are making efforts to teach the children from the disadvantaged sections of society. I joined them as a teacher in August 2020.

I started teaching the 10th science batch. The only challenge I had was to speak fluent Hindi as the kids were based in Mumbai but my kids were too good and adjusted to my teaching.

I am really thankful to DBM India for giving me this platform. I was happy to see that despite the pandemic, DBM had not allowed the education of these children to suffer and had taken help from volunteers like me to continue their education. I wish that every child in India gets the knowledge and education that he or she deserves.

Hi, my name is Amaan Gaziyani and I am doing my Bachelors in Engineering (C.E.) from D.Y. Patil, Navi Mumbai. I have always dreamt of doing something for society since I was a child and DBM India has given me that opportunity. DBM India is educating children from the slums whose schools could not offer online education as they lacked resources.

It's been 4 months with DBM India now and the experience is just amazing. I got to know about DBM India in the lockdown through one of my friends and I was fortunate enough to get into it and share my knowledge with these extremely talented kids.

The pandemic has changed the entire education system and teaching online was the biggest challenge for me. Initially, it was really tough for me as well as for the students as it was something new for all of us but as time passed we got comfortable with this mode as we didn't have any other choice, I guess.

The best thing I discovered in the entire journey was the hunger of these students for knowledge. This motivated me more and made me work harder and harder each day and I ended up learning something new from them too.

Sharing knowledge is the best thing an individual can do to bring up some change in the society and I want to thank DBM India for showing their faith in me, to let me share mine with these wonderful kids.
